Dear potential Louisiana Master Gardener program applicant,

Thank you for your interest in the Louisiana Master Gardener program, a volunteer program of LSU AgCenter. Louisiana Master Gardeners help the LSU AgCenter provide research-based horticultural education to the public.

Participation in the program begins with 40 or more hours of training, typically held over fourteen class periods and one or more field trips. After successful completion of the coursework and an end-of-course exam, participants become Louisiana Master Gardener (LMG) Apprentices and have one year to complete at least 40 hours of volunteer service. Following fulfillment of the volunteer service requirement, LMG Apprentices become Certified Louisiana Master Gardeners. After that, continuation as a Certified LMG requires 20 hours of volunteer service and 6 hours of continuing education per year.

Some topics covered during training include botany, plant propagation, soil science and fertilizers, vegetables, fruits and nuts, ornamental plants, lawns, plant diseases, plant insects, weeds, and pesticides.

Volunteer opportunities include a variety of ways of providing research-based horticultural education to home, school, and community gardeners. Some examples of possible volunteer opportunities are as follows:

- Giving presentations/demonstrations for civic or school groups
- Distributing LSU AgCenter publications at events, such as farmers markets and community festivals
- Working in demonstration gardens
- Assisting with school or community garden projects
- Assisting with LSU AgCenter horticulture education events

Volunteer opportunities are not limited to the examples mentioned above but can include other ways of reaching the public with non-biased, research-based horticultural information.

If you are interested in participating in the Louisiana Master Gardener program in Tangipahoa or Washington Parishes, please complete this application and return it to me (MHFerguson@agcenter.lsu.edu) or to one of the addresses shown at the top of this page. The holding of a class will depend in part on the number of applicants who have expressed interest.

You can expect a response within two weeks of our receipt of this application. If you do not receive a response within two weeks, or if you have questions, please e-mail me.

Sincerely,

Mary Helen Ferguson, Ph.D.
Associate Extension Agent - Horticulture
Tangipahoa and Washington Parishes
