

LOUISIANA COOPERATIVE EXTENSION AT A GLANCE

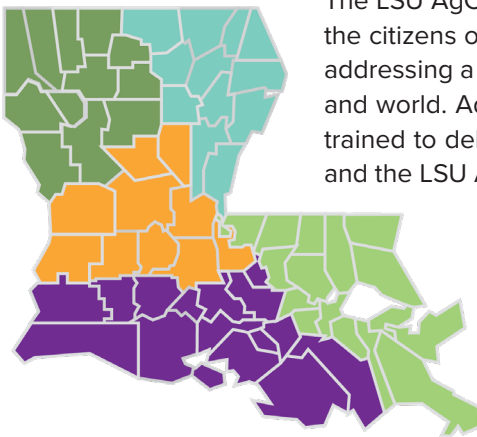

ABOUT

The LSU AgCenter Cooperative Extension Service serves as the educational arm of the Louisiana Land-Grant University System. Extension serves as a bridge between Louisiana State University and the citizens of the state by translating research into education and impact. Working in partnership with the U.S. Department of Agriculture National Institute of Food and Agriculture (NIFA), state and local governments, extension is improving the lives of Louisianians through information transfer in agriculture, natural resources, nutrition and healthy communities and youth development. With a presence in every parish across the state, extension brings cutting-edge research discoveries to individuals, communities and businesses, empowering their knowledge and ultimately improving their lives.

Louisiana Cooperative Extension engages with rural and urban communities across the state to meet the challenges they face, embrace changing technologies, educate our youth, enhance food production systems, improve nutrition and food safety, address food insecurities, prepare for and respond to emergencies, and protect our environment.

WHERE IS EXTENSION LOCATED?

The LSU AgCenter Cooperative Extension Service has both regional and parish offices to serve the citizens of Louisiana. Located at each of the regional centers are researchers and scientists addressing a variety of needs based on that particular region as well those affecting the country and world. Additionally, all 64 parishes have an LSU AgCenter office staffed with professionals trained to deliver the research from within the Extension Service, as well as research from LSU and the LSU AgCenter research centers.
